Exploring Food and Urbanism:
Is urban food resilience possible in a context of climate emergency?

AFVS Seminar June 13th
Associate Professor Susan Parham

Globally, food is critical to sustainable urbanism everywhere across cities from kitchens to gardens, food markets, food shops, streets, neighbourhoods, suburbs, and hinterlands. Drawing on primary research this presentation explores how food planning and design, practices and economics, are closely intertwined with how places can be shaped and reshaped with food and resilience in mind.
